CWT Executive Named Supply Chain CEO of the Year

SINGAPORE, November 23, 2018 – CWT Pte. Limited announced today that one of its senior executives Kay Kong Swan has been recognised with the “Supply Chain CEO of the Year” accolade at the Supply Chain Asia Awards 2018. Kay is the CEO for CWT’s integrated logistics division and a member of the logistics firm’s senior leadership. He also serves as the Chairman of Singapore Logistics Association as part of CWT’s industry and community involvement.

“Comprising of industry professionals and veterans, the Awards 2018 Committee reviewed Kay’s achievements in the logistics sections within Asia and credit him for his contributions in CWT,” said Paul Lim, Founder/President of Supply Chain Asia Community Ltd which organised the awards. “Additionally, we recognise his efforts in growing the industry in his role as Council member and now Chairman of the Singapore Logistics Association. Kay is certainly an inspirational and exemplary leader for many logistics professionals to emulate.”

At CWT, Kay leads and oversees integrated logistics business which covers transportation, yard storage, distribution, warehousing and other value-adding logistics. Over time, he has built strong relationships with long-time customers spanning from large local enterprises to major global MNCs for CWT’s Singapore operations. In recent years, Kay has also established another operating base out of Port Klang Free Zone, Malaysia to add increased value for existing and prospective customers.

To augment its market competitiveness, CWT has made productivity a mainstay of its modus operandi with Kay as one of the key team drivers in company-wide productivity. He was instrumental in setting up Singapore’s first multi-modal container transportation hub which incorporated the island’s first vertical chassis parking system, thereby improving trucking fleet productivity through resource sharing among local hauliers while efficiently storing and retrieving chassis for deployment on-demand. In 2015, CWT was named the logistics sector winner at the Singapore Productivity Awards.

Kay is also one of the key team leaders in the ongoing development of a productive container storage retrieval system at CWT’s mega integrated logistics hub in Singapore. CWT’s 2.4-million-square foot mega hub is the largest integrated ramp-up warehouse cum container depot in Singapore and Southeast Asia. With its spacious floor layout, the mega hub is ideal for CWT customers looking to consolidate their multi-site operations into a single warehouse location and offers the flexibility and scalability for future business expansion.

“It takes a great team to amplify individual success, so this award is really the culmination of all the hard work and collective efforts by everyone in the CWT family,” said Kay. “I am encouraged by the strong camaraderie and support from my co-workers and employees to deliver my best while shaping the company and logistics industry for the better.”

The Supply Chain Asia Awards is an annual event which honours exemplary individuals and corporations for their significant contributions to the logistics and supply chain industry. For more information about Supply Chain Asia Awards 2018, visit <http://supplychainasia.org/awards-2018/>.
